Shiffrin Breaks Slalom Record

Shiffrin ends year in style with record-breaking 36th World Cup slalom win

Seven years ago to the day (12/29/2011), Mikaela Shiffrin shared her first podium with childhood hero Marlies Schild in Lienz, Austria. (Cristophe Pallot - Getty Images)

By Tom Horrocks

Semmering, Austria –Mikaela Shiffrin (Avon, Colo.) will be the first to admit that just because she won, it doesn't necessarily make her the best. With her 36th career FIS Ski World Cup slalom victory in Semmering, Austria, Saturday, Shiffrin became the women's all-time World Cup slalom win leader, surpassing her childhood hero Marlies Schild.

"Marlies for me is always going to be the best," said Shiffrin, who also became the first ski racer in history to win 15 World Cup races in a single calendar year. "I wouldn't be where I am without being able to watch her...yeah (the record) is incredible, but she deserves that spot in my mind. If I can inspire any young athlete as much as [Marlies Schild] inspired me, then I did my job in this sport."

Shiffrin's 51st World Cup win didn't come easy. Starting fifth in the first run, she took a .48-second lead over a fired-up Petra Vlhova, who won Slovakia's first World Cup giant slalom on Friday, but has finished second to Shiffrin in every slalom so far this season. Vlhova skied a strong second run to take the lead, which forced Shiffrin to take some risks as the final starter on the softening track. But thanks to her East Coast skiing roots at Vermont's Burke Mountain Academy, those were familiar risks.

"First run felt quite good, second run was more of a battle," Shiffrin said. "I was trying to not risk everything, but making speed on every turn. I had a couple mistakes, a couple moments where I was fighting for my life, but it was a good fight."

Vlhova settled for her fifth second-place result in slalom this season at .29-seconds back, while Wendy Holdener of Switzerland was third at .38. With her victory, Shiffrin extended her World Cup lead to 466 points over Vlhova. She also leads the World Cup slalom and super-G standings and is ranked third in the giant slalom, and ninth in the downhill standings.

Victory number 51 also moved Shiffrin to seventh on the all-time World Cup win list, surpassing Italy's Alberto Tomba with 50 wins. Sweden's Ingemar Steinmark is the all-time World Cup slalom win leader with 40 victories.

For the next two weeks, Shiffrin will have the opportunity to focus on slalom with a city event in Oslo, Norway, on New Year's Day, followed by a night slalom in Zagreb, Croatia, on Friday, before returning back to Austria for another slalom in Flachau.

Shiffrin Wins Cortina Super-G, Extends World Cup Lead

Shiffrin wins Super G at Cortina d'Ampezzo., Italy

By Tom Horrocks - January, 20 2019

Cortina d'Ampezzo., Italy –On a perfect sun-splashed course in the Italian Alps, Mikaela Shiffrin (Avon, Colo.) trusted her instincts and equipment and came away with another FIS Ski World Cup victory in super-G Sunday in Cortina d'Ampezzo.

Starting 17th with the red World Cup leader's bib, Shiffrin, who also leads the World Cup super-G standings, watched a few competitors before her, including teammate Lindsey Vonn (Vail, Colo.), struggle on the Olympia delle Tofane course.

"I watched a couple girls going and I was thinking, 'Ok..there are maybe two or three points on the course you really need to be on the right direction, and otherwise, it's just to be aggressive,'" Shiffrin said. "I was comfortable with my skis and really, really comfortable with my setup, so I feel like I can do whatever I want if the surface is good, and today the surface was really nice."

After inspecting the course, Shiffrin admitted she was a bit nervous, but all that disappeared once she was in the start.

"I was just kind of thinking 'oh, the course looks tricky and a little bit more difficult than I thought from my inspection,'" she said. "But at the end when I started, I was just trying to trust my line and be aggressive. And yeah, I'm a little bit lucky...it's super tight, but I'm happy to be on that side of the green light."

Unlike most athletes who raced in Sunday's super-G, Shiffrin did not ski either of the downhill training runs or the downhills at the venue, which can be a more challenging way to head into a super-G race. But for Shiffrin - who had a solid day of super-G training in Sarntal, Italy prior to arriving to Cortina - it was no problem.

Tina Weirather of Liechtenstein was second, followed by Tamara Tippler of Austria in third. Laurene Ross (Bend, Ore.) was 23rd. Vonn and Alice Merryweather (Hingham, Mass.) were among the 22 athletes who did not finish, but both skied away and are OK. Vonn was making up time as she skied down the track but got pulled pretty low and couldn't make the next left footer, crossing her arms in front of her and skiing through the panel.

"I haven't quite processed everything yet," an emotional Vonn said after her DNF. "I can't seem to stop crying. It's been a lot of great memories here in Cortina. I tried to really ski my best, I tried to come through the finish and make a good result for the fans here, but I didn't quite do that."

"It's just hard. I thought it would be easier honestly. But it's not," she continued while mentioning the support she has received from other athletes, including Italy's Sofia Goggia, who is also working to come back from an injury and came out to support Vonn in her final race at Cortina, meant a lot to her. "It's more than ski racing,

It's a respect for each other, sportsmanship, and what skiing is all about. And I'm lucky that I'm able to experience all of that. I feel really thankful that I've been able to do it as long as I have."

Shiffrin acknowledged that it must have been a week full of emotions at a place that was so special to Vonn - a place Vonn has had so much career success. "For Lindsey, I can imagine it's really emotional," noted Shiffrin. "She had so many amazing races here...for it to be the last time she's in Cortina racing, I imagine she must be going through so many memories and it's a reflection of her entire career. The fans are coming out here to cheer for her - they don't care if she wins, they just want to see her again. So, in that way, it's also happy memories."

With the victory, Shiffrin extended her overall World Cup lead to 596 points over Slovakia's Petra Vlhova, who did not race Sunday. Shiffrin also leads the World Cup super-G, giant slalom, and slalom standings. Shiffrin is now tied with legendary Austrian skier Hermann Maier with 54 victories, sitting sixth place all-time among men and women. She needs just two more victories in order to equal Vreni Schneider (55) in fifth place.

Up next, the women's World Cup tour moves on to Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Germany for downhill and super-G races Jan. 24-25.

Affordable options

Looking for ways to save on a winter family outing? Check out some of these affordable family-friendly options:

- Most resorts have discounted rates for kids 12 and under.
- Children five years of age and under receive a free lift ticket with the purchase of a full price adult lift ticket at participating resorts.
- Fourth and fifth graders can ski or ride for free by signing up for the Snowpass program.
- Midweek skiing and riding is not only usually less than on the weekends but you get less crowded slopes to learn and play.
- Lift ticket, rental, and lesson packages for beginners are a great way to get everything you need for the day and save a few bucks too.
- Groups of 15 or more qualify for discounted rates at many of the resorts.
- Night owls can score big discounts by hitting the slopes for nighttime skiing at select resorts.

Kids Programs

Skiing and boarding is a great way to get the kids active in the great outdoors all winter long and develop a life-long passion they can enjoy for years to come. Did you know the best time to teach your child to ski or snowboard is between the ages of 4 and 7? Pennsylvania resorts offer a variety of kid-friendly programs, starting around age three, designed to build self-esteem, while providing a safe and fun learning environment. Programs are based on age and skill level and include single lessons, first-time sessions and month-long adventure camps.

Childcare

Ready for a day on the slopes, but have a tiny tot who's not quite old enough for the children's ski and board programs? No worries. Many PA resorts offer childcare during the winter season for ages starting as young as just six weeks. So, even the smallest family members can enjoy a fun learning environment while mom and dad are experiencing a great time on the mountain. Reservations are required, due to limited availability, so be sure to call ahead for childcare services at these SkiPA resorts.
