USASA 2019 Season Continues Its Success

EASTERN REGION Mid-Atlantic Series

The Mid-Atlantic Series began in 1988 under the direction of Tony and Cathy Lincoln. In 1998 the torch was passed to Bill Van Gilder and his wife Rebecca Van Gilder. They have grown together with the many families in the region competing at their events over the years. Bill and Rebecca are proud parents of a little girl, Harper, born in 2012. They are hoping she too enjoys the winter life (and competing.)

As one of the longest running regions on the country, the Mid-Atlantic hosts Rail Jam, Slopestyle, Skier/Boardercross, Slalom and Giant Slalom Events. The Mid-Atlantic is a fun family focused series. The emphasis at each Mid-Atlantic event is to have fun, improve and develop a life long passion for snow sports. They offer a true grassroots competition experience with safe, fun and fair events, which allows aspiring competitors of all ages to get together and have some fun.

Despite the warm weather affecting majority of our East Coast series early in the season, 2019 is well underway with events across the rest of the country.

Shiffrin Wins Record Fourth World Slalom Title

Shiffrin ends year in style with record-breaking 4th World Cup slalom Title

Mikaela Shiffrin on the podium with record breaking win at Are, Sweden (Cristophe Pallot - Getty Images)

By Tom Horrocks

Are, Sweden – Mikaela Shiffrin (Avon, Colo.) won a record fourth-straight FIS Alpine World Ski Championships slalom title with an amazing come-from-behind victory in Are, Sweden, Saturday. Shiffrin’s win was even more impressive considering she was battling not only the best slalom racers in the world but a new opponent - a nasty chest cold.

“Halfway down the (second) run, I ran out of oxygen,” she said. “It was tough today.” It was so tough that at one point before the second run, she coughed so hard that her stomach went into spasms and she couldn’t breathe. Her mother, Eileen Shiffrin, said to her: “You don’t have to do this!”

In the end though, Shiffrin “just figured I had to be tough” for 60-seconds and she credited her team with the victory. “My whole team was around me all day and helping to make sure I was drinking...resting... and not wasting energy” she said.

After finishing third in the opening run, Shiffrin toughed it out and found her groove under the warm afternoon sunshine to absolutely nail the second run, moving into the lead by .72 seconds over Slovakia’s Petra Vlhova, and putting significant pressure on the final two racers - Sweden’s Anna Swenn-Larsson and Switzerland’s Wendy Holdener.

“I knew I had to fight really hard the second run because Anna and Wendy are too strong, and the girls who were behind me were also really close,” Shiffrin said.

On the second run, Swenn-Larsson was fast up top but lost time to Shiffrin on the lower part of the course. Holdener, meanwhile, held a .15-second lead over Shiffrin, but quickly lost that and much more when she missed a gate just seconds into her run and was forced to ski back uphill in order to make the gate. She eventually finished 17th.

Swenn-Larsson held on to win the silver, her first World Championships medal, and Vlhova won the bronze, her third medal of the 2019 World Championships. With the win, Shiffrin goes down in the history books, becoming the first-ever athlete - male or female - to win in a specific discipline in four consecutive World Championships. Shiffrin’s slalom gold is her fourth-straight, including 2013, 2015 and 2017 World Championships. It is also her third medal of the 2019 World Championships, including the super-G gold and giant slalom bronze.

Paula Moltzan (Prior Lake, Minn.) finished 18th, and Nina O’Brien (San Francisco, Calif.) skied an impressive first run, but missed a gate in the second and was forced to hike. She finished 34th.

March Madness on the PA Slopes

With all the recent storms, it appears Winter weather is hanging on for at least for a little while and conditions could not be better for skiing! Skiers rejoice, there is still plenty of fresh snow and even more time to hit the slopes this season. Whether you're looking for a weekend staycation or an action-packed Spring Break vacation, now is a great time to visit your favorite Pennsylvania Ski Area Resort. Crowds tend to be smaller this time of year and there are a lot of fun events to enjoy, too, from Pond Skimming, Spring Carnivals and Races, to St. Patrick's Day Celebrations and even a special day dedicated to your furry family members.

Pennsylvania is the perfect place for families to find affordable winter fun and create magical memories to last a lifetime. With 19 ski areas from the Alleghenies to the Poconos you will find countless ways to play together in Pennsylvania.

Whether you are looking for a quick weekend getaway to introduce the youngest family members to the slopes or planning a week-long vacation, there are a variety of packages, programs and specials designed to fit every adventure and pocketbook.

Shiffrin Punches To City Event Win, 6th World Cup Slalom Title

Stockholm, Sweden –City event slaloms are like a slug-fest on snow as racers punch through the gates. But as any good fighter knows, opening a match with a fist bump is a sign of respect, even when you're the reigning champion.

“Before the second run, we did a little fist bump, like ‘yeah, come on,” said the undisputed five-time World Slalom Champion Mikaela Shiffrin (Avon, Colo.), who punched her way to FIS Ski World Cup victory no. 14 this season after knocking out Germany’s Christina Geiger in Tuesday night’s city event big final in Stockholm, Sweden. “It was a different feeling at this race. Just a little bit more focus, but I enjoyed it. And it was nice to share with Anna and (Chris)Tina.”

Coming off her World Championships slalom victory Saturday in Åre, Sweden, Shiffrin was still battling a nasty chest cold that almost KO'd her. “It was a push tonight. I don't think I could have done better if I was healthy,” she said. “My skiing was good, and I was attacking and doing everything that I could do for this evening, and it worked out just fine. So sickness, or no sickness, I'm really happy about that.”

While she maintained her focus on the city event slalom, a record sixth World Cup slalom title was on the card as the main event, which she would secure if she led the slalom standings by more than 200 points at the end of the night over the challenger from Slovakia - Petra Vlhova.

In the opening round of 16, Shiffrin's beat Norway's Ragnhild Mowinckel to advance to the round of eight, where she defeated Austria's Katharina Truppe. But it was Geiger who delivered the knockout punch - defeating Vlhova in the round of eight and set Shiffrin up to secure the World Cup slalom title by night's end. But, Geiger wasn't done swinging yet. She continued her impressive skiing by defeating Sweden's Frida Hansdotter to advance to the finals against Shiffrin, who defeated Sweden's Anna Swenn-Larsson to set up an all-Sweden battle for third.

After the fist bump, it was game on as Shiffrin took the first run by the smallest of margins - 0.01-seconds!

“It was really, really close,” Shiffrin said of her 1/2 final match up with Swenn-Larsson, as well as her big final match up with Geiger. “I was training a bit yesterday at the same time as her (Anna Swenn-Larsson)...and watching her doing this blocking style and I thought ‘whoa, she's really, really good at it.’ I think she's faster than what she was able to show in the race tonight.”

In the second run, with the World Cup slalom title on the line, Shiffrin took the victory by 0.27-seconds and matched the World Cup season win record of 14 victories held by Austria's Vreni Schneider. Swenn-Larsson defeated Hansdotter for third.

Shiffrin has wrapped up her sixth slalom Crystal Globe as she now leads Vlhova by 203 points with only two races remaining. Shiffrin also leads the overall World Cup standings by more than 700 points over Vlhova, as well as teh giant slalom and super-G standings.

A Look Back On Lindsey Vonn's Illustrious Career

By U.S. Ski & Snowboard -February, 17 2019

Lindsey Vonn - the most successful female ski racer in history - wrapped up her illustrious 18-year career with a bronze medal in the downhill at the FIS Alpine World Ski Championships in Are, Sweden, on Feb. 10, 2019

In victory, defeat, battling back from crashes and injuries, Vonn will be remembered as a vicious competitor and true champion, who brought the sport of alpine ski racing to the mainstream of American sports.

She left everything on the hill in her final race in her typical - all or nothing - fashion that over her 18-year career brought her 82 World Cup victories; eight World Championship medals, including two gold in downhill and super-G at the 2009 World Champs in Val d'Isere, France; three Olympic medals, including the downhill gold at the 2010 Games in Whistler, Canada; and a record 20 FIS Ski World Cup titles.

"Anything is possible if you work hard enough!"

- Lindsey Vonn

"Lindsey Vonn will be celebrated as not only the greatest U.S. female skier of all time, but as an athlete who has inspired people around the world, both in and out of the sport of ski racing, for many years," said Tiger Shaw, President and CEO of U.S. Ski & Snowboard. "We have been so lucky to have been able to share many of Lindsey's extraordinary achievements, but now the time is right for Lindsey to call time on her incredible career.

On behalf of everyone in the U.S. and throughout the global ski racing community, thank you Lindsey. You have consistently raised the bar, you have created a legacy that will live forever, and you have given us all some of the greatest memories in our sport."

Known as the most successful female ski racer in the world – Lindsey Vonn is one of the few world-class, four-event ski racers. She is the only American woman to ever capture downhill gold at the Olympics and the only American woman with four World Cup overall titles.

Six weeks after she turned 20, Vonn (then Kildow) produced her first World Cup victory in Lake Louise, Alberta. She has since captured an all-time win record on the women's side with 82 World Cup wins.
